New Beethoven biography for children

When Ludwig stepped out of the frame. Beethoven talks to children about his life.

Translated from German by Ida Cerne

"Stupid Beethoven!" The little Paul sits at the piano and practices the piece "For Elise". But it just won't work out. Angry and desperate, he scolds the composer. But Ludwig van Beethoven doesn't let that get away with him: He climbs out of the portrait on the wall to play the piano piece to the boy himself. A dialogue develops between the two, in which Beethoven talks about his life and his music.

A Beethoven biography for children with a new perspective on the great composer: a brilliant musician and a character full of humanity and friendliness despite a quick-tempered nature and the tragic fate of hearing loss.
